

ABSTRACT

A method for deposition of titania, and titania-containing, thin films by CVD, using an atmospheric pressure glow discharge plasma as a major source of reaction, which leads to film properties, and film growth rates, normally only achievable (by atmospheric pressure CVD) with significantly higher substrate temperatures.